2019 | ONE DAY—HUNDREDS OF CONTACTS Largest Regional IFT Expo

CSIFT Suppliers' Symposium & EXPO

9:00 AM-6:30 PM | November 6 | Donald E. Stephens Convention Center

Chicago Section IFT Symposium: The Future of Food

9:00-9:45 AM Developing a Culture of Innovation to Accelerate Future Growth.

Loren Ward, Senior Vice President of R&D, Glanbia Nutritionals

How do you develop a culture of innovation within an organization to accelerate future growth and take advantage of advancements in relevant scientific fields? Network structures have been shown to be effective at creating innovation. Hierarchical structures are not known for creating innovation but rather the core engine for implementing and executing innovation to produce new ingredients and products. Organizations can struggle to balance hierarchical and network structures to capture innovation and accelerate company growth. Innovative examples from aeronautics, medical science, home appliances and food and nutrition will be presented to outline concepts to consider for shaping and developing an innovative culture.

11:45 AM-12:30 PM Traceability Now and in the Future

Bryan Hitchcock, Sr. Director Food Chain & Executive Director of the Global Food Traceability Center at the Institute of Food Technologists.

In today's highly connected world, consumers and trading partners demand more end-to-end supply chain transparency. Technology advancements are driving digitization of the entire food supply chain. Whether insights into chain of custody, food safety, quality, sustainability, production methodologies, and/or provenance are desired, traceability principles and tools are well positioned to meet your needs. —Come learn more about the latest trends and technologies

WOOD VANILLIN

Vanillin is the world's most popular flavour for use in food and fragrances. Wood vanillin is naturally occurring within the tree, embedded in the tree structure.

Visit Brenntag at Booth 405 & 407 to learn more

During the biorefinery process the vanillin within the tree is separated, collected, purified to more than 99,9%, crystalized & packed in 25 kilo cartons. Wood vanillin is defined as a Derived Natural ingredient for cosmetics and personal care according to the International Standard ISO 16128-1.

Vanillin widely occurs in plants and is one of nature's protection systems. This protection comes in the form of inherent anti-microbial properties which take effect when the trees or plants are attacked by fungi, yeast, bacteria or insects. As such, vanillin acts as a preservative when used in food, fragrance and cosmetic formulations.

Borregaard has produced wood vanillin since 1962. Today, Borregaard is the world's most advanced biorefinery, making several hundred commercial bio-based products from trees.

Wood vanillin is sustainable and gives a 90% reduction in CO₂ emissions compared to guaiacol vanillin synthesized from crude oil.

Hence the climate impact of Borregaard's wood vanillin is much smaller than that of oil-derived vanillin.

Wood Vanillin

Oil-based Vanillin

Oil-derived vanillin has a climate impact which is 29 times greater than wood vanillin, irrespective of where it is produced.

There is a limited amount of vanilla beans produced globally, and there is an increasing market focus on replacing synthetic ingredients with bio-based, plant-based and sustainable ingredients.

"Borregaard supplies the market with high grade bio-based vanillin."

The Real Blueberries™ Seal

Real Blueberries + Great Products = Happy Customers!

Got real blueberries in your product? Tell consumers with the Real Blueberries™ Seal. The 2,437 highbush blueberry growers in 32 states invite you to join Team Blueberry! Qualifying is simple. There is no cost. It's a great way to benefit from the popularity of real blueberries.

Big-time Blueberry Demand.

Since the 1990s when news about the health benefits of blueberries first gained momentum, US per-capita use of fresh and frozen blueberries in the USA has increased more than 500%. Consumers crave fresh and frozen blueberries all year round. A typical comment, "I have blueberries daily to get my antioxidants!" Make sure customers know they are getting products with lots of real blueberries inside.

Blueberries Everywhere!

Hundreds of new blueberry-containing products are launched each year – 925 in 2016. These include: baking, confectionery, dairy, snacks, pet foods, natural cosmetics and others. Blueberries: fresh, frozen, dried, liquid, purée, powder... contribute to product popularity on the supermarket shelf. Most products contain adequate or optimal amounts of real blueberries. The Real Blueberries™ Seal tells customers – this is the real deal!

Interested?

- Take a photo of your blueberry product and ingredient statement for our team to review. Send to realblueberries@blueberrytech.org.
- If the product is approved, we will send you a simple agreement. If not, we can provide tips on how to optimize blueberry content.
- Once accepted, we will send the seal artwork ready to include on your package.
- You are now part of Team Blueberry!

US Highbush Blueberry Council
